Pure Food

Through the labors of the state pure food and drug commission, the general public in Colorado has of late seen some remarkable revelations concerning the nature of the things it eats. The commission, instead of prosecuting cases, has been warning dealers, and the result is that a close inspection nowadays will show strange changes from the labels that have hitherto been made familiar to the public. In design and general appearance, the new labels are like the old, but a close examination will show new things printed, usually in very small type. Here is a list of some of the changes:

Formerly "Pure Maple Syrup," now "Cane and Maple Syrup;" on what was previously known as pure apple cider the words "imitation and artificially colored," but in very small type now appear; potted turkey is now "potted meat, turkey flavor;" pure cider vinegar is now "distilled and artificially colored," pure apple butter is now "fruit butter, apple flavor, 25 per cent glucose."

The new labels confess that bologna sausage has preservatives in it that curant jelly is 75 per cent apple juice, that pepper contains 25 per cent of adulteration—such as charcoal, corn meal and ground cigar boxes; that ice cream is frozen milk and coloring matter; that French mustard is 75 per cent not mustard at all; that olive oil is made of cottonseed, and that whisky and port wine are mysteries. —Denver Republican.

Although the town of Encino on the Jelen cut-off is only six months old, it already has a population of 200 and is growing at a rapid rate, while new enterprises keep pace with the development of the surrounding country. The town was platted by Bonifacio Salas.

It contains among other enterprises a general merchandise store owned by G. W. Bond and company, with R. C. Dillon, formerly of the Gross-Kelly company of Albuquerque, as manager. A blacksmith shop is an addition to the town and a postoffice is a convenience which has been installed.

The Santa has built a commodious depot.

The country surrounding Encino is a good farming community and corn and beans are the principal products, although practically anything can be raised. More than a thousand ranches get their supplies from the town.

Water is found at a depth of ten to ninety feet, and the soil is rich and productive.

The principal need of the new town just at present is a good hotel and restaurant, as there is no place at which transients can stop now. A hotel would be a paying proposition.—Albuquerque Citizen.

HE COULD.

When Casey ran a meat market over in "the patch," a certain Englewood man undertook to have fun with him, and asked: "Can you give me a yard of pork?" "Surely, sir," Mulcahey," he shouted to his man, "give Mither Jones three pigs' fate."
